

RICHARD HELMS

The Director of Central Intelligence

Richard McGarrah Helms became the Director of Central Intelligence on 30 June 1966. He had been the Deputy Director since 28 April 1965. The oath of office was administered in the East Room, The White House, following remarks by Lyndon B. Johnson, the President of the United States. President Johnson on 18 June 1966 had announced that Mr. Helms would be the new Director and on 20 June he sent the nomination to the United States Senate. Mr. Helms appeared before the Armed Services Committee in a public hearing on 23 June and the Committee by unanimous vote approved the nomination; on 28 June the Senate of the United States unanimously confirmed the nomination.

On 30 June 1966 just prior to Mr. Helms taking the oath of office in the East Room of The White House, President Johnson said:

"It is a very special pleasure to me, to one who has spent thirty-five years in the Federal Government (not always under the protective arm of the Secret Service or the Civil Service) to see one of the high positions in this Government filled by a man who has devoted his entire career to the public service of his country. Dick Helms, the man we are naming to this post, is such a man.

"Although he has spent more than twenty years in public life attempting to avoid publicity, he has never been able to conceal the fact that he is one of the most trusted and most able and most dedicated professional career men in this Capitol. No man has ever come to this high critical office with better qualifications.

"I think it was Patrick Henry who said, 'The battle is not to the strong alone, it is to the vigilant and to the active and to the brave,' and it is to Dick Helms and to the Agency that he will now head that we must look for this vigilance. His own record and the past achievements of his Agency give us full confidence in the future operation of the Central Intelligence Agency with judgment, with intelligence and above all with great public integrity."

Mr. Helms was born in St. Davids, Pennsylvania, 30 March 1913. He attended Carteret Academy in Orange, New Jersey; Le Rosey School in Rolle/Gstaad, Switzerland; and the Realgymnasium of Freiburg i/Breisgau, Germany. He was graduated in 1935 from Williams College where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. While in college he was editor-in-chief of the yearbook, GULIELMENSIAN, and also editor-in-chief of the college newspaper, THE WILLIAMS RECORD. He was a correspondent in Europe for the United Press. Mr. Helms interviewed Hitler, and his story "Hitler and Mars Incorporated" was published in the INDIANAPOLIS TIMES. In 1937 he joined the Indianapolis Times Publishing Company and later became its national advertising manager. Mr. Helms was a member of the Literary Club in Indianapolis.

During the winter of 1942, he was active in the public relations efforts of the Navy Relief Society fund-raising drive in New York City.

Mr. Helms was commissioned Lieutenant (jg), United States Naval Reserve on 1 July 1942. After attending Naval Training School, Harvard University, he was assigned as Operations Officer, Headquarters, Eastern Sea Frontier. In August, 1943 he was assigned to the Office of Strategic Services and served in Washington, England, France, and Germany.

Upon discharge from the United States Naval Reserve in 1946, Mr. Helms was a civilian employee in the Strategic Services Unit, War Department, which was the successor organization to a major part of the Office of Strategic Services. He was employed there until the establishment of the Central Intelligence Group, to which he was transferred. He was then assigned to the Central Intelligence Agency when it was established on 18 September 1947. In August of 1952 he was appointed by General Walter Bedell Smith, then Director of Central Intelligence, as Deputy to the Deputy Director for Plans. On 17 February 1962, he was appointed Deputy Director for Plans by John A. McCone.

The Director of Central Intelligence

Richard McGarrah Helms became the Director of Central Intelligence on 30 June 1966. He had been the Deputy Director since 28 April 1965. He was originally appointed by President Johnson on 18 June 1966, then on 16 December 1968 President-elect Nixon announced that he would be retained.

On 7 March 1969 President Nixon visited the Central Intelligence Agency to address its employees. He stated on that occasion:

"It has been truly said that the CIA is a professional organization. That is one of the reasons that when the new administration came in and many changes were made, as they should be made in our American political system after an election, and a change of parties, as far as the executive branch is concerned, I did not make a change.

"I surveyed the field. I checked the qualifications of all of the men, or, for that matter, any women who might possibly be the Director of the CIA. That could happen.

"But I concluded that Dick Helms was the best man in the country to be the Director of the CIA and that is why we have him here."

Dear Marquis Biographee:

This repeated request for your cooperation concerns your data as they are presently contained in the WHO'S WHO IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST File.

I enclose a copy of your sketch that has appeared previously in this Directory. Any additions or changes that you may have mailed to us in recent months are in our update file, but have not, as yet, been incorporated into this basic sketch. At a later date, all sketches selected for publication will be returned to the biographees in galley proof form for final checking, and at that time, all updates will have been incorporated into the sketch.

However, because we are about to begin computer keyboarding for the composition of the Thirteenth Edition of WHO'S WHO IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST, I wanted to offer you another opportunity, at this stage, to make any necessary changes resulting from events that may have occurred since you last communicated with us.

The Editors ask that you let them know if there are any such changes that should be included in your sketch. If there are none, would you please return the enclosed sketch with your signature or initials to indicate that you have approved it as it appears. A postage-paid envelope has been enclosed for your convenience.

You understand, of course, that you incur no obligation, whatsoever, in cooperating with our Editors as requested. Indeed, the Editors fully realize it is they who are under obligation, since the reference serviceability of the Marquis Who's Who biographical dictionaries to an important degree results from the cooperation of the biographees themselves.

In this regard, it has long been our custom to extend to our biographees a substantial discount from the list price of the book in which their sketch appears. Because of the economics of printing, however, such preferential discounts are available only on a pre-publication order basis.

Thus, although the list price of the Thirteenth Edition of WHO'S WHO IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST is $44.50, your status as a biographee entitles you to obtain the volume for $33.50, if your order is accompanied by payment, or $37.90 if you prefer to be invoiced upon delivery of the volume. May I point out that these prices represent savings of 25% and 15% respectively.

For your convenience, I have enclosed a Biographee's Preferential Order Form, and your signature will validate its privileges. Of course, you may reserve as many copies of WHO'S WHO IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST as you wish for use in your personal library or any other library you choose to benefit.

"There is properly no history; Only biography"—Emerson

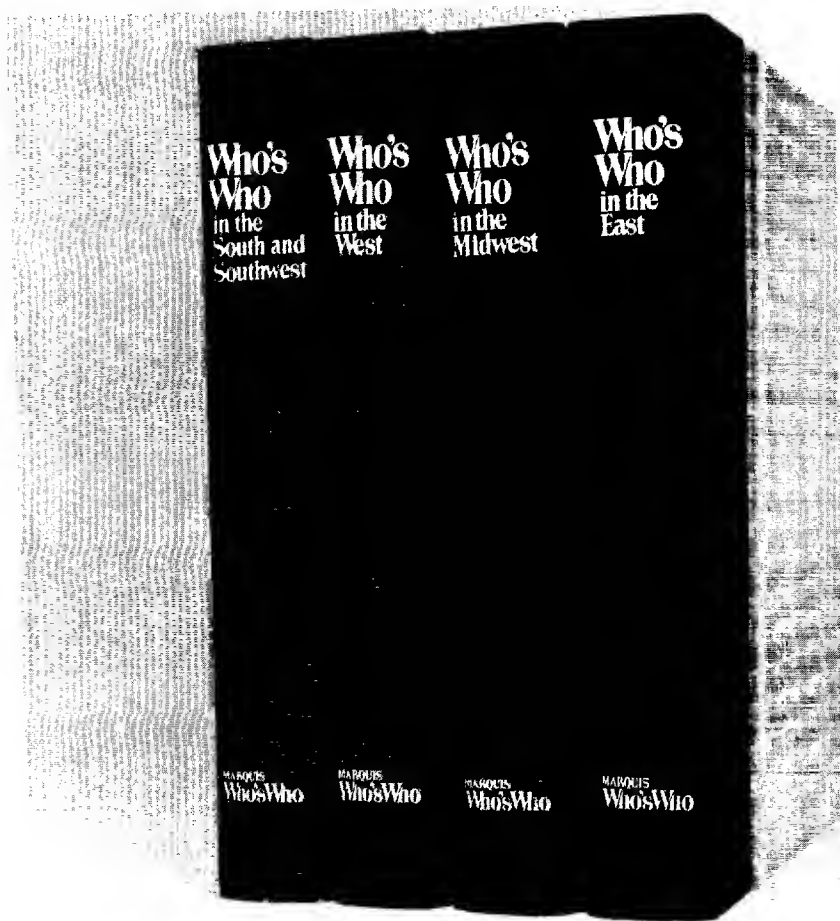

In the history of the world, an overwhelming number of the great achievements can be traced to the work or the influence of a relatively small handful of men and women—individuals who were dedicated, enterprising, able, and questioning to a degree that set them apart from their contemporaries. As Emerson implied, the story of their lives is the history of the world.

The Editors of Who's Who in America believe that each region, each state, each community has its own handful of men and women whose achievements influence the ongoing life of modern society and, hence, are worthy of permanent recording. You, they believe, are among these men and women whose civic pride and professional skill have contributed so much to the progress of American life.

You, the Editors believe, have earned the distinction of a life synopsis in the Marquis Biographical Library Regional Volumes.

Furthermore, they feel it is your duty to provide the requisite information for the public record and for posterity.

The procedure for taking advantage of this occasion for well-deserved personal recognition, and for fulfilling your responsibility to supply data for your sketch in a regional Who's Who volume, is outlined in the accompanying letter.

"By labour and intent study . . . joined with the strong propensity of nature, I might perhaps leave something so written to after times as they should not willingly let it die."

John Milton

About an opportunity offered to but six in ten thousand

A life of accomplishment, sufficiently noteworthy to warrant legitimate reference interest, provides an opportunity—and with it a responsibility—to enrich the public record . . . and preserve among family treasures . . . an accurate, verified recording of one's personal public achievements.

The Achiever has this responsibility to fellow citizens of our Democracy, to the impressionable younger Americans so dramatically in need of worthwhile models on which to pattern their lives, to the professions handling the day's news, to writers and researchers, to historians and biographers.

Along with this societal responsibility goes a directly personal duty to one's self and one's family: the duty of maintaining for posterity a record of one's life activities in a form that will assure its availability to those it will interest and benefit.

Similarly, the Editors of Marquis Who's Who have a duty—to identify, impartially and to the best of their abilities, those individuals who, by their accomplishments, clearly meet carefully established standards of comparative subjectivity of reference interest. Once such a selection has been accomplished, however, the maintenance in print of an accurate and up-to-date life record must depend principally on the responsiveness of the selected individual.

Marquis Who's Who biographical directories constitute an unmatched bank of data on the life records of individuals distinguished on a regional and national level. Selection under the Marquis Who's Who standards for personal achievement and distinction assures the reference worthiness of these biographical synopses.

Typical comments that "bear witness"

"... Renders a real service to those preparing material for the press and interested in the men and women who are contributing to the life of this region..."

"... used a great deal as a reference work by many of my associates."

"... contains many listings of men and women of importance I have not found properly sketched in any other reference tool of its kind."

"A must as a reference tool."

"... use extensively . . . of inestimable value to us in doing our daily work."

"We in publishing find (it) . . . of constant use in our business."

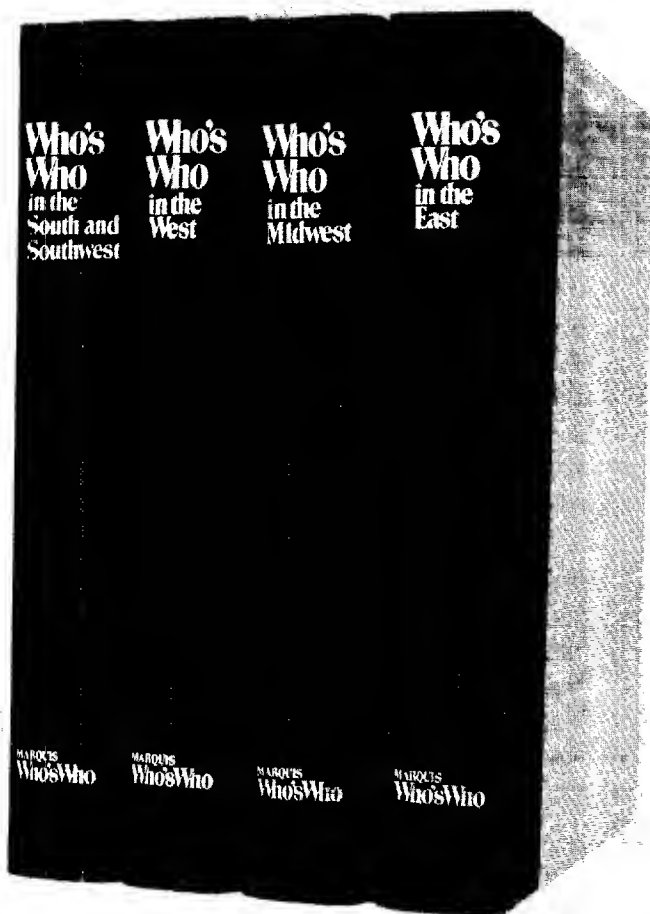

"A beautiful volume . . . the Marquis organization deserves congratulations for the binding and general design . . . a real addition to anyone's library."

"A beautiful, well executed volume."

"A splendid compilation..."

"No species of writing seems more worthy of cultivation than biography."

The attached biography of Mr. Helms, approved by him, was sent to Williams College on 13 May 1965 in connection with his selection as a winner of the National Civil Service League Award.

STATINTL

Washington, D.C., May 1965. Richard McGarrah Helms, who was graduated from Williams College with a degree of B.A. in 1935, will be one of the ten outstanding government officials to receive an award on 19 May 1965 at the Sheraton-Park Hotel in Washington, D.C. from the National Civil Service League. There will be a Career Service Awards Banquet at which Dr. Frank Stanton, President of Columbia Broadcasting System, will be the speaker. Dr. Stanton will be introduced by former Federal Communications Commission Chairman Newton Minow. The presiding officer at the banquet will be former Postmaster General J. Edward Day. The purpose of the awards which are made annually is to promote the prestige of the public service and to gain recognition for outstanding careers in government. The National Civil Service League is a nonpartisan, nonprofit citizens' organization founded in 1881 to promote efficiency in Federal, state and local government. It has strong endorsements of its value and programs from Presidents Johnson, Kennedy, Eisenhower, Truman, and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. Helms was nominated by President Johnson and confirmed by the Senate recently as the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. He is the senior foreign intelligence operations officer of the United States. Immediately before his advancement to the office of Deputy Director, he was the Deputy Director for Plans in the CIA in charge of the Agency's overseas operations which concern the security of the United States.

Mr. Helms was born in St. Davids, Pennsylvania in 1913. He received his secondary schooling at Carteret Academy, Orange, New Jersey; Le Rosey, Rolle/Gstaad, Switzerland; and the Realgymnasium in Freiburg i/Breisgau, Germany. At Williams College he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and was editor of the yearbook GULIELMENSIA and also was editor of THE WILLIAMS RECORD.

Following graduation from Williams, Mr. Helms became a correspondent for the United Press Association in Berlin until 1937, during which time he interviewed Hitler and his story "Hitler and Mars Incorporated" was published in the INDIANAPOLIS TIMES. Mr. Helms was National Advertising Manager for the Indianapolis Times Publishing Company until 1942 when he entered the United States Navy and was assigned to the Office of Strategic Services; he has served United States intelligence continuously since then. He was concerned with OSS plans and operations in the European theater. Later he was Commanding Officer of the OSS Berlin Detachment.

Mr. Helms was one of the pioneers in creating and developing the Central Intelligence Agency. He testified before the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate the Administration of the Internal Security Laws and his testimony is recognized as the definitive review on the subject of fraudulent propaganda, forgeries, and fabricated documents originating from Communist sources. For his presentation, Mr. Helms received the approbation of the Senate Subcommittee. Under the title of "Communist Forgeries," his testimony was published by resolution of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The value of this work is of such significance that it has been translated into Arabic, French, Spanish, German, and Italian as a means of instructing others on the fraudulent practices of the opposition.

Skilled as an administrator and outstanding as an intelligence officer, Mr. Helms is a prodigious reader. While in Indianapolis, he was a member of the Literary Club in Indianapolis, a famed organization that included in its membership George Ade, James W. Riley, and other distinguished literary men.

Mr. Helms and Julia Betzman were married in 1939. Their family includes one son, Dennis, now a student at the University of Virginia Law School, and a son and a daughter born to Mrs. Helms during a previous marriage.

Mr. Helms' leadership in the foreign intelligence activities of our country and the public recognition of his contributions to American national security reflect on the excellence of his academic training at Williams College.

On 28 April 1965 in the White House when Vice Admiral William F. Raborn, United States Navy (Retired) was sworn in as Director of Central Intelligence, and Mr. Helms was sworn in as the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, the President said in part:

"Admiral Raborn's great strength as a leader and a manager is his respect and his reliance upon his co-workers. Admiral Raborn is a team-builder and he is a team-player.

At the Central Intelligence Agency he will have as his strong right arm one of the most respected career professionals in the Capital of this great nation, Mr. Richard Helms.

"Few career men in this government are so highly respected as Mr. Helms. I find food for thought in the fact that a man so successful in Mr. Helms' present profession trained for this work in the newspaper profession, and Mr. Helms, if you need recruits, see me. I might commend some of these in this room to you now.

"But I am very proud of this team and I am proud we have been able in recent weeks to persuade many of our most outstanding career public servants to accept promotions and additional responsibilities in the government, to assume more vital roles. The high positions of this administration are being filled today, yesterday and tomorrow on the basis of merit without regard to politics, without regard to partisanship, and I hope this pattern can be permanent.

"To Admiral Raborn, to Mr. Helms, I extend my congratulations."
